

Let's Pretend

Children 3 – 4 years

Most children 3 – 4 years of age have a large vocabulary. Children may talk to themselves as they complete tasks, communicating their actions. Children who participate in pretend play have been found by teachers to be more socially competent. Pretend play strengthens a child's attention, memory, problem solving, creativity, imagination, language and literacy.

Bertrand the Bored and the Imagination Jar - Illustrated by Jess Racklyeft

Bertrand the friendly Boredom Monster sleeps in the walls at Charli's house. If you were to put your ear up against a wall at her house, you might be able to hear him snoring. He drags his feet around and lounges on her family's couches all the time. He is an absolute slob.
